

Firefighter Behavioral Health Alliance
“Takin’ it to the Streets”
Traveling Workshop Series

Coming to a town near you!

THE MISSION

Next year, the Firefighter Behavioral Health Alliance (FBHA) will travel across the United States, Takin’ it to the Streets to bring greater awareness to Firefighters (FFs) and Emergency Medical Technicians (EMTs) about behavioral health and suicide prevention and awareness. At the end of the series, we will have visited approximately 38 states and journeyed approximately 16,000 miles. It is our mission to visit FFs and EMTs where they are, offering impactful in-person training everywhere from small rural companies to large city departments. In these interactive workshops, attendees will be educated on how to recognize signs and symptoms of those in behavioral health distress. FBHA is seeking sponsors to help defray the cost of workshops and expenses for departments.
